Task 1 Corpus Audit and Preprocessing

Corpus Summary

| Metric | Value | | --- | ---: | | Number of documents | 871 | | Total token count | 1,147,881 | | Average document length | 1317.89 | | Median document length | 1250.00 | | Vocabulary size before preprocessing | 57,401 | | Vocabulary size after preprocessing | 47,998 |

Parser and Cleaning Decisions

- The parser locates document boundaries using the leading `@@<numeric_id>` pattern. - Document identifiers are preserved as metadata but excluded from the cleaned document text. - Cleaning is intentionally light and non-destructive: - repeated gap noise is mapped to `<GAP>` - all text is lowercased - whitespace is normalized - punctuation, stopwords, and rare tokens are retained in the cleaned corpus output - The cleaned corpus therefore remains suitable for both retrieval and downstream inspection.

Supervision Assessment

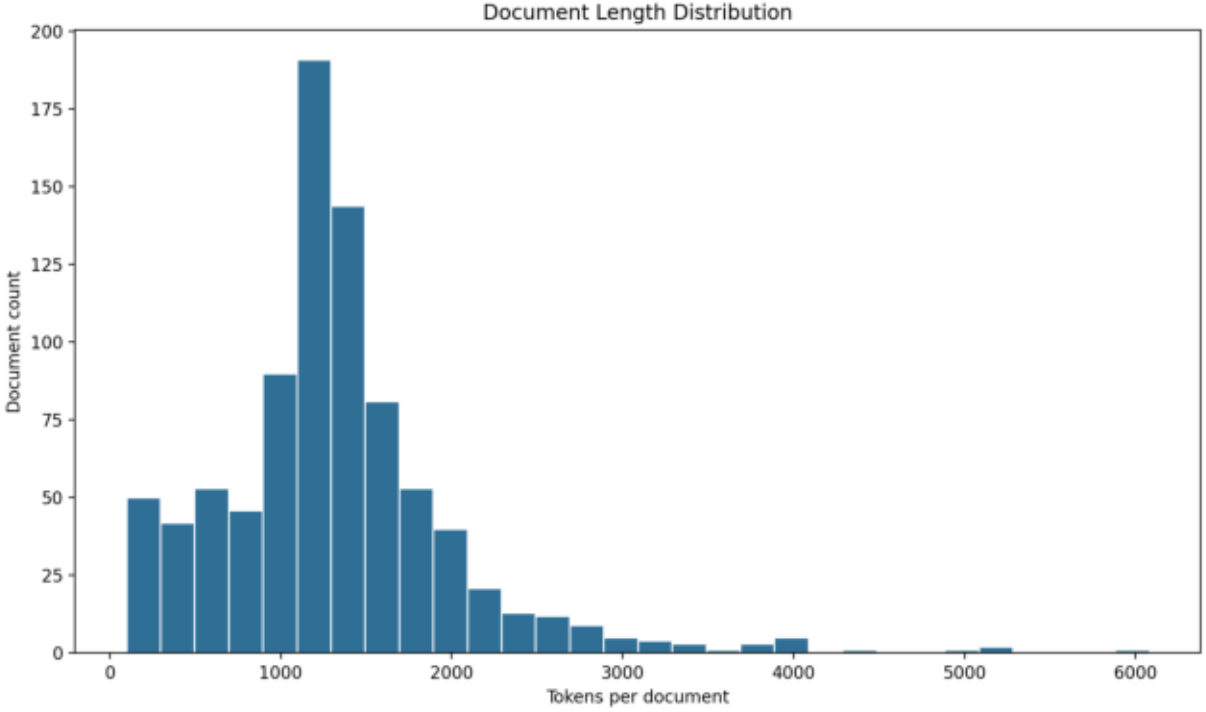

The corpus is best treated as an unlabeled, unsupervised collection. The files contain document identifiers, but they do not expose class labels, topic metadata, or any pre-defined supervision signal. The IDs are therefore bookkeeping keys rather than semantic annotations. Any supervised experiment built on top of this corpus requires labels to be created after inspection.
